Yes folks it's October once again! and that means a month or two of incredibly intense effort to put together NINE and a bit years of figures for your interest, edification, instruction, education, clarification and just in case you can't sleep something to aid you in that direction. Below is an explanation bar which should assist with head scratching, if it does not do this visually please cut the section out, dip it in some starch and use that instead.

In simple terms – here are your fares for the last NINE years – here is where you were in the National league table in May over all those last NINE years and where you are in October 2008 – here are the increases you have had over nine years. The national average rise has reached £1.85 a massive jump since the £1.64 in May.....I wonder why that is??!!. 134 of you have had increases of two pounds or over since 1999 but there are still two, Bolsover and the Isle of Wight, who have had only 20 pence in those nine years.

As usual the normal league table has this month been divided into areas to match those in the area tables; area averages are given at the bottom of each section together with the national averages for comparison. You will find these on pages 108 to 113. As you will have seen during the year we have been doing some percentages over the nine year period and the response from readers certainly suggests that this is proving useful. So here below is a breakdown of your area percentage rises over nine years and for comparison a selection of the 68 worst performers in the country.

While checking these tables our just keep in mind that the price of diesel in May 1999 was 73.00 pence per litre and was 115.4 pence per litre in May edition a nine year rise of 58.08%. The price has now settled a little bit but is at 125.38 pence per litre which brings the rise up to 71.75%

Remember these percentages have nothing to do with where you are in the table they are everything about whether the living that you were earning in 1999, on the fares available to you then, has been maintained or not; anything under the area average and the fuel average might suggest that you are on a downhill slope!! If you look at the summary of your area immediately below you will see the Midlands, North, South West and Wales have all burst through the 60% barrier with the national average just a stones throw away.

Just a final point; if you, as a local Authority are on the brink of becoming part
